THE EXTRA SESSION.

THE QUESTION OF ITS DURATION UNDER DISCUSSION.

A Probability That It May Have an Extended Sesssion—The Difficulty of Reorganizing the Committee—The Discussion of the Treaties—
The Nominations to be Made.

THE SOCIAL FEATURE.

The Changes Introduced by President Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The social aspects of the new administration are discussed in the newspapers here in an interesting fashion.

The Star believes there is a growing impression that the social interests of the white house

will not be neglected under the new administration, and that while there may not be so much dignity as heretofore, white house

guests will undoubtedly enjoy themselves

as much, if not more. It is said that Miss Cleveland, who will be the social head of the white house for the next four years, has the faculty of making herself agreeable to a great many people at once. Word comes from Albany that her memory for faces and names is remarkable.

It is difficult to determine to her personal popularity, but the probability is recognized that they may require a few days to become familiar with the men about them before negotiating all the changes they desire.

THE FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The intention which was recently entertained by the members of the committee on foreign relations, of bringing forward

the new treaties during this session, is now in suspension, owing to the wish of many senators to get away as early as possible. It is thought, however, that the new administration has the right to do, recall for negotiation some or all of the more important treaties. On the other hand it is said that

EDWARD WHITE, JR.,
JOHN H. WHITAKER.

R. A. HEMPHILL, Notary Public Fulton County

ATLANTA, MARCH 9, 1858.

The length of the extra session of the senate is now a subject of some speculation. The "Backbone" land grant is likely to lead to a long and bitter debate. Then the treaties which are before the senate may be taken up.

Mr. Blaine has evidently selected Senator Evans as his mouthpiece in the senate. While Mr. Evans is representing his friend from Maine, it would not be surprising if he did not do more work for himself than for Mr. Blaine, in order that he might be the nominee in the next campaign.

The promotion of Senator Garland, of Arkansas, to the attorney-generalship, comes at a time when Arkansas politics are in a lively condition. The legislature has only emerged from one deadlock of six weeks' duration, of which Senator Jones was the outcome, only to find a senatorship still to fill, with all the old candidates in the field.

Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, in speaking of the cabinet, says there can be no well-grounded objection to the material of which the new cabinet was composed. The geographical distribution might be expected to cause more or less disappointment. The men chosen were of acknowledged character, ability and integrity. He was not disappointed at not being selected, and would have accepted solely on account of his friends' wishes if he had been offered a portfolio.

A THOMAS HARDENMAN, who represented state at large in the congress just expired, is strongly pressed for the commissionership of agriculture. His appointment to that office would give it a capable head, would give unbound satisfaction as a party measure, and would be welcomed by the agricultural interests without regard to party lines. For years Colonel Hardeman was at the head of the Georgia agricultural society, and in this manner became thoroughly familiar with the wants of agriculture. No man is better known in agricultural circles throughout the United States than Colonel Hardeman, and it is to be hoped that President Cleveland will call him to the head of the agricultural bureau.

GIVING AWAY PUBLIC LANDS.

In the senate Friday, Senator Van Wyck offered a resolution calling on the secretary of the interior for information in regard to the action of Secretary Teller in issuing patents for the seven hundred thousand acres of land comprising what is known as the Backbone land grant. On the face of it this transaction is crooked, but Teller is said to be highly indignant that any of his official acts should be called in question, and he promises to defend himself in a manner that will leave no doubt as to his authority to issue these patents. The matter went over until to-day, when no doubt there will be a very animated debate between Van Wyck and Teller, the latter having passed from the interior department directly into the senate.

But Teller, it should be remembered, is a typical republican and prides himself on the fact. He is a very small man intellectually, but a very large republican. The issuance of the patents for the seven hundred thousand acres known as the Backbone land grant was one of the last official acts of Secretary Teller, and the patents were issued in the face of the fact that a bill providing for the forfeiture of the grant was already before congress. This is said to be the first instance where patents have been issued while congress was discussing the right to the bill, but it is not the first fraudulent issue that has been made from the interior department.

This grant of lands was originally made to a railroad that never was built. This railroad transferred its claims to another railroad that never had an existence. The latter disposed of its charter to the Texas Pacific railway, but the land grant was reserved. Afterwards the grant was transferred to the American improvement company, an affair attached to the Texas Pacific, the chief stockholders being Gould and Huntington. It thus appears that Teller has taken advantage of his position to give to Gould and Huntington seven hundred thousand acres of the people's land. There is fraud in the transaction, and fraud of such a character that a democratic administration is compelled to take cognizance of. Let there be an investigation of the matter, and while the investigation is going on it might be found profitable to attack the interior department for other mean frauds.

THE COLORED TROOPS.

The Philadelphia Press is worried about the democratic party and the negro. It is very much distressed, for instance, because there were only two companies of colored troops in the grand procession that followed President Cleveland to the capitol and witnessed the inauguration. The Press then goes on to state that the vast majority of negroes in the south continue to cling to the republican party. So far as we know, nobody has ever disputed this. The vast majority of negroes in the south are republicans, but they are apathetic republicans. They no longer look to the polls to vote the republican ticket, for the reason that they have learned that their condition is just as comfortable under a democratic as under a republican administration.

This is certainly true with respect to Georgia. When the democrats refrom the plundering republicans, the negroes were uneasy for a month or so, but they soon settled down to work, and have been accumulating property and acquiring homes ever since. Those that desire to vote go to the polls and vote on election day, but the great majority go about their business. The result is that there is never much of a contest between the democratic and republican parties in Georgia, and the negroes are better off than if they insisted on going to the polls and voting had met into office. They are not democrats, perhaps, but they are good enough democrats to suit the purposes of those who desire to place good men in the responsible offices.

Whether the colored citizens, finding that democratic rule is better for them and for their race—better for their progress and prosperity—will become democrats we do not know. The question is an interesting one. The answer thereto, in our opinion, will be decisive as to the capacity of the negro for rightly appreciating the responsibilities of citizenship. Certainly no pressure will be brought on him to bring him into the democratic party. He has his choice in the matter, as every other citizen has.

The press, in the course of its comments, prints the alleged remarks of a negro who was asked by an ex-slaveholder to vote for Horace Greeley. Here is the language put in the negro's mouth: "Dar m'ms' be suffin' wrong 'bout dis Mars Greeley, and you 'uns wouldn't be fer him." This is a libel on the negro. Never since the world began did a colored man use such language as this. The press has been imposed on.

RUSSIA AT THE GATES OF INDIA.

The endless eastern question has been reopened over a boundary line of Afghanistan.

The delimitation question was to be settled by a commission, but the commissioners have never met. Sir Henry Lumsden, the British commissioner, is in Afghanistan, awaiting his Russian associate, but the latter for some time failed to appear. In the meanwhile Russia has seized some of the disputed passes and towns, and England is preparing to support her ally, the ameer of Afghanistan, as she is bound to do by treaty. But something stronger than treaty obligations impels her to fight to the utmost against the invasion of Afghanistan. Her prestige in the east and perhaps her power in India hang upon the issue.

But the war point has not been reached. Herat remains in the hands of the Afghans, and while it does, the diplomats will be busy. There is really little probability of war. Russia may think this is a good opportunity to extend her power in the east, and she certainly does desire to overcome nihilism, but still she is in a bad way financially, and Herat is a long distance from bases of supply. She may gain some point in diplomacy before the trouble is well over, but in the end the subject will doubtless be referred to the boundary commission, and Russia's scheme of aggrandizement will be further postponed. No doubt the question of empire in the distant east will some day bring war, but it is not likely to do so at present.

But if England's greatness of empire must be again established by war, let no one think that there will be a one-sided contest. Herat is a strongly fortified town, and the Afghans are able to hold it until an army can be dispatched from the Punjab. There are in India alone 100,000 soldiers, of which number 65,000 are Europeans. An expeditionary force of 20,000 men can be fitted out, and such a force would be able to meet any force that Russia can speedily push forward to the borders of Afghanistan. England rules the sea, and the whole trouble would have to be fought out in the land of the Afghans. General Roberts, who made the great march to Candahar, understands that country thoroughly, and it is reported he must be again established by war, but in the end the subject will doubtless be referred to the boundary commission, and Russia's scheme of aggrandizement will be further postponed. No doubt the question of empire in the distant east will some day bring war, but it is not likely to do so at present.

But if England's greatness of empire must be again established by war, let no one think that there will be a one-sided contest. Herat is a strongly fortified town, and the Afghans are able to hold it until an army can be dispatched from the Punjab. There are in India alone 100,000 soldiers, of which number 65,000 are Europeans. An expeditionary force of 20,000 men can be fitted out, and such a force would be able to meet any force that Russia can speedily push forward to the borders of Afghanistan. England rules the sea, and the whole trouble would have to be fought out in the land of the Afghans. His equality with the father in every particular was clearly set forth, and a clear explanation of what is to be done, and deny and confess, etc., draw the line with some clear distinction. The music at this church is always good. There are no flourishes, but good old fashioned gospel singing.

The congregation was large and appreciative. Rev. Mr. Lane assisted Dr. Clark in the communion service.

A CRANE AND HIS MISSION.

He Felt Impelled to Remove President Cleveland, and Now Abides in a Cell, From the New York Sun.

Mr. Robert Doherty of the Christian Advocate was writing in his office in the Methodist book concern yesterday, when a visitor called. The stranger introduced himself as Elias Bray, of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania. Mr. Bray's round face was flushed, and he was evidently excited. He was short, stout, wore clothes of clerical cut, and carried a ruffled, old fashioned high hat in his hand.

"The Almighty," he said gravely, with a dignified bow to Mr. Doherty, "has commissioned me to use moral suasion to remove President Cleveland from the office."

"Holding both hands over the surprised editor's head, he continued:

"Do we here now solemnly appoint you my lieutenant to aid and assist me in my divine mission?"

Then Mr. Bray stalked majestically from the room and visited the adjoining office, where he met John M. Phillips, publisher of the paper. He impressively appointed Mr. Phillips his second lieutenant. Then he left the building, two men followed the crane and had him arrested at the corner of Broad and Jefferson market, and when he searched him found $20 and a ticket for England in his pockets.

"I am going to go to Justice Wedde, to inform Mr. Cleveland I won't use no force, I would wave my hand and say, 'Stand aside, and announce the year of jubilee has come.'

"Return, ye ransomed sinners, home."

"What's your name?" Justice Wedde asked.

"No name," was the curt answer, in a loud and dramatic tone.

"Where do you live?"

"I was brought here."

"How do you live?"

Finally satisfactory answers were returned to a number of other questions. The justice said he would hold him for examination.

"I have examined the prisoner," said the justice.

"To have him tried here," said the justice.

The man ran his fingers through his hair, rubbed his head, and said, "Well, my head is all right." Then he was put in a cell, and quieted down until he got there.

"I am here to do you harm," he said. "I am a member of the Methodist church. He is 45 years old, was born in England, and his father was a member of the Wyoming conference. His father was a merchant and had a large estate, and died some time ago at Tavistock. Elias married Amelia Ann Hooper, and came here in 1876. He went to Wilkesbarre, and there he worked for a while, then became a builder there and did a good business. He has a nephew, Charles S. Bray, the master builder of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre railroad. Bray left Wilkesbarre and Wilkesbarre, and has been staying at a hotel in Canal street.

"Cleveland is said in his cell, 'I may be good enough to let you go, but I will not let you go by spiritual manifestations, and not by force. I am the herald of a new era. I will clean and straighten the crooked paths of the world. I'm a member of no party, but am working under divine authority.'

His friends in Wilkesbarre were notified by telephone.

On His Feet Again.

Colonel "Jack" Haverly's friends will be glad to know that his clouds are rolling by and that he will soon see the golden, or rather silver, sunshine that will put him on his feet again. It is known that he failed because he put all his money in Colorado and Utah silver mines, and that when calls were made on him to meet his heavy expenses he had no cash, and his credit finally collapsed.

A gentleman who was formerly associated with Haverly says that the latter's silver fortune was lost, and that one of his sons, who is Mrs. Haverly's name, earned last year for her about $1,500 a week during the mining season, and that he will again assume as his son's self, so that the one will be supported. And the same gentleman also says that the other properties of Haverly are all right, and that he expects the other to get the forty thousand on his feet in a year or two, when he will make things livelier than ever.

Coronet Nigger Beef.

From the New York Tribune.

A specimen of the tricks resorted to in some European markets to excite distrust and suspicion of American products is furnished by the Copenhagen National Almanac. In the Swedish province of Smoland it says, a stampede circulation of stories has led to the "grimed nigger beef," and, incredulous as it may seem, it was readily believed among the poorer classes who were the principal buyers of the imported meat, on account of its color. The stampede went so far that an appeal was made to the authorities to stop this disgusting and unwholesome trade.

The Power to Eat Pie Restored.

Faint-edited Consumers, in Erie Dispatch.

I had kept alive on port wine and scraped apples and now I eat ham and fried potatoes with a relish. Oh, but the ways of the Almighty are inscrutable. I have since eaten pork and beans, and last night I consumed a quantity of pie without experiencing any harm.

Minnie Maddern in Caprice.

A well known noted young actress, in a piece which she recently declaimed, by common verdict of those north and of the south, one of the best produced on the American stage. Such is the treat in store for our citizens this week. We are glad to see Minnie Maddern in play becoming her tall and slender figure, and her movements are very graceful. For instance, it is said that cotton seed was an excellent fertilizer. Well, I had 'em, and as they were a clean, nice thing to handle, I put 'em under most everything in my garden. I was a runnin' in yinys set heavy, and one mornin' went out to peruse 'em and saw the stars. The next night of a long while under the stars, he had jolted up and up about three inches. He hadn't eat many nor any thinks to myself, he's jest goin' around a-somelin' of 'em. Next morn all my sets was a-settin' out six inches up with air right to the thick stand of cotton you ever did see. Now I havent' heard about spinnin' 'em, as my zebra call it, before, but I think it would be trumplin' in the wind, and up about three inches. This piece was handily but not very much, in many seasons. The piece was handily staged, the scene in the Adirondacks being pretty pretty.

I'll not gloat. I'll not peep by half.

But bless the Lord, my time has come,

Excuse me while I laugh.

BILL ARP'S LETTER. THE SAGE SMOKING THE PIPE OF PEACE.

Relections and Deductions—Bugs and Things—The Kiss and Fall of Presidents and Preachers—A High-Minded Mule—A Little Political Discourse—Soldiers of the Camp.

I love to meet a nabor and hear him say "how's craps?" I continue to like farmin'. It like it better and better, except that the wheat is sumwhat doubtful about making a crap. A little long bug with a tail at both ends has got in the joints and sucked the sap out, and it's fallen down in patches. Looks like there is always sumthin' preyon in sumthin', and nuttin' is safe from disaster in this sublunary world. Flies and bugs and rust prey on the green wheat. Weevils eat it up when it's cut and put away. Rats eat the corn—mole rats eat the gubers—hawks eat the chickens—the minks killed three of our ducks in one night—choleras kill the hogs—and the other night one of my nabor's mules cum along with the blind staggers and fell up a pair of seven steps right into my front gate and died without kickin'. Then there is briars and nettles and treas and smartweed and poison oak and Spanish needles and cuckoo burs and dog fennel and snakes, that's always in the way on a farm and must be looked after keenly, especially snakes, which are my eternal horror, and I shall always believe are sum kin to the devil himself. I can't tolerate such long insects. But we farmers have to take the bad with the good, and there is more good than bad with me up to the present time.

A BELL-RINGER'S HARD FATE.

William Peck Resents His Brother's Allegations of Misconduct.

SACRAMENTO, N. Y., March 8.—William Peck, the Swiss bell-ringer, now with his wife, an inmate of the Corliss county poorhouse, is awaiting the trial to determine the statements of his brother, H. H. Peck, of New York, concerning which he was accused of having caused his brother's misfortune. It is said that he was once robbed of $5,000 in Boston while intoxicated, denied them and asserted that this cruel attack was undeserved, as he had always treated Horatio with brotherly kindness, and had refrained from mentioning it in connection with the story of the death of himself and wife. It is said also that Mrs. Peck's pride has kept her husband from telling the full story of his misfortunes.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

Bonds, Stocks and Money.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE.

ATLANTA, March 7, 1885.

The market is quiet but firm, prices in some cases being higher than last week.

Long date Atlanta bonds are in request, both locally and from distant points.

State bonds of short maturity are also in demand, offerings are light.

West Point stock and debentures are both strong, and will likely touch par unless purchases fall off.

Georgia railroad stock is, in view of the near approach of the next dividend day (April 1), very quiet with but little doing in it.

Georgia Pacific first and second back the early part of the month advanced again and are now strong, showing a still higher tendency. We fully informed that the gap of forty miles between Columbus, Alabama, and the end of the Columbus, Mississippi, division will certainly be built at an early day. If done, this will justify an issue of $400,000 additional first mortgage bonds; but instead of depreciating the value of those already issued, will strengthen them by giving the continuous line and the benefit of their Columbus division for through business, while at present it has to depend on local business for support, and the traffic from Atlanta to Mississippi points will then go direct, while present it is diverted at Birmingham, where it is about forty miles from the market capital, interested in Georgia Pacific's acquisition of the road during the week and expressed themselves as gratified at the physical condition of the property, its management and prospects.

Money continues in good supply at unchanged rates.

New York exchange buying at par to 1/4 per centum at 1/4 premium.

STATE AND CITY BONDS.
